CHECK CHICKWEED IN PASTURES

Chickweed, a troublesome pest in Virginia alfalfa fields, has had its heavy infested field, there will be favorable conditions in which to develop this year, and farmers are advised to check their fields now to determine whether or not to spray.

Chickweed is light green in color and grows all winter. Right now it could mean that plants will nearly show a yellow-sharpen appearance. In a thick stand of chickweed, the plants will be 4 or 5 inches high by spring.

Use 2 to 3 pounds of chloro IPC in 20 gallons of water per acre. The chemical is slow to act during the cold winter months, so do not expect rapid kill.

FARMERS' TAX GUIDE NOW AVAILABLE

The new 1957 tax guide, written especially for farmers, is now available from the county agent's office.

The bulletin explains in non-technical language most of the income tax rules which concern farmer. It is intended for use in preparing federal income tax returns for the calendar year 1957.

TESTED BULLS ARE AVAILABLE

Beef cattle owners needing a bull should consider buying a performance tested animal. Performance testing means the animal has been scored using weight and conformation factors. These factors give the breeder additional knowledge and since growth rate is inheritable, the gentleman should have calves that will gain at a more rapid rate.

Gattlemen who would like to purchase tested bulls may get breeding names from the county agent's office.

STUDENTS ARE ENROLLING AT VPI

Many high school students have already applied for admission to VPI for the 1958 fall session.

The School of Agriculture badly needs top prospects to meet the demands of agribusiness. Boys and girls with a farm background should seriously consider the field of agriculture.

BETA CLUB NEWS

On Tuesday night, November 26, ten members of the Appomattox H. S. Beta Club and Mrs. Ivey Holland, sponsor, attended the Heart of Virginia Beta Federation meeting at Farmville High School. The meeting began with a welcome from Bill Ulrich, president of the Farmville Beta Club. The devotional was led by Sidney Bradberry, of Powhatan. Dr. Boggs, Dean of Longwood College, was the main speaker for the evening. He gave an inspiring talk on "What Is Expected of College Students." Elridge Blanton, president of the Federation, presided over the business meeting. After the business meeting adjourned, a very delightful social was enjoyed by all.

The regular monthly meeting of the Appomattox Beta Club was held on Friday, December 6, 1957. John Evans, president, called the meeting to order. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by the secretary, Laura Carson. Devotions were led by Frances Carson, chaplain. Joella Ferguson, Jack Tibbs, Ann Cunningham, Glenn Morris, and Carrie Jane Inge presented an interesting program entitled, "Primer for Americans."
